A guest with a difference

NOT EVERYONE COMES WITH AN RV

As you may imagine, we receive many and varied emails and phone calls. In the ten years since we've been here, however, never one like this. All in French, we were asked by a lady caller "can you accommodate a man and his donkey for a one-night stopover?" After clarifying that he would not be bringing a tent with him but would have his own bedding, a hurried discussion with Di secured agreement that we would put him up in a static that had a fenced garden, and we told the lady that we would do so.

Now happily RVing, this is Franc & Lisa's home that will soon be at Parc Verger

So mid-afternoon that day up the drive comes the walker with his donkey, which was laden with bags containing who knows what. It was a friendly creature and a source of considerable interest to all our guests on site. Like the human guest, who was on a walking holiday and heading for the Vendee, he was no trouble, and quietly cropped the grass whilst his owner visited Dino's bar for a meal.

There were a few brays during the night, but nobody was worried about that, and next morning after reloading the bags, and a thorough check of hooves, the pair of them moved off on the next stage of their journey. We soon cleared away the gifts left by the donkey (whose owner had offered to clear them) and are looking forward to a good show of flowers in that part of the garden! ten years at Parc Verger, and so many of our guests have become friends we wanted to stay local so that we can meet up again.

So there's an opportunity for you - if you are in France in July come on down and see us and meet the new owners. But after that keep coming - we've told Franc and Lisa all about our guests and they can't wait to meet you all.

NOW ON FACEBOOK

Yes, one advantage of Franc and Lisa becoming owners is that they are au fait with social media, and an early action by Franc is to publish a page on Facebook. There were actually pages tucked away, but now you can go onto Camping Parc Verger and find us - Franc will be keeping it up to date with news as it happens.

happy at having maintained our record of never turning away anybody in the time that we have been at Parc Verger.

NEW OWNERS FOR PARC VERGER

We are delighted to say that the preliminary documents were signed at the end of April, and the new owners, Franc and Lisa Culshaw, will be taking over on 1st July. They have been caravanners, motorhomers, and are now RVers, so you will be as welcome after June as you have always been here.

Di and I are going to be on site part of the time for about a month to work with Franc and Lisa, after which we are retiring and moving into a house that we are buying in the village. We have loved every minute of our
